British automobile brand Aston Martin has gained immense appreciation for its auto-making skills since inception. This time around the company is in news for building something that is starkly different from where its forte lies. Aston Martin stunned visitors at the 2016 Milan Design Week with the unveiling of the AM37 powerboat in association with Quintessence Yachts.

Although the powerboat was introduced at the design event, it was an ice breaker for enthusiasts. The brand first showcased its renderings in England, revealing some of its unique features in June 2015 in Dubai.

Here's a detailed look at this chic water vehicle.
