2016 ASTON MARTIN AM37 YACHT

IN VEHICLES BY SAM JORDAN

MI place 22 Tweet 5

If you're Aston Martin and you're on a roll, with a vehicle featured in the upcoming 007 flick and three new models due before the end of the decade, why not see how far you push your luck and build a yacht?

Teaming up with a Dutch company called Quintessence Yacht, the British automaker is building a new 37-foot boat, the AM37. With a hull made from lightweight composite materials and structural parts built with carbon fiber, this promises to be a lightweight luxury vessel with world-class handling, performance, and comfort. No firm word yet on the power specs, but we do know there will be two versions: the AM37 S (top speed of 60 knots/70 mph) and the more luxury-centered AM37 (top speed of 50 knots/57 mph). The interior will feature an integrated HD touch screen controlled by voice commands if you like, and the yacht will have a pair of individual captain's chairs and a wrap-around rear-bench with room for at least eight people. All we have so far is computer-generated images, but a grand unveiling is due later this year.
