First of all, before you start selling the house and planning your tour of the South of France, this boat doesn't actually exist. Quintessence Yachts, Mulder Design and Aston Martin have created this incredible render of the AM37 to, well to show off, and they have certainly succeeded.

This outstanding showpiece might however; someday make it to production, although we wouldn't count on it being soon. The 37 foot model will be available in two tears of trim. The AM37 S will be a sportyacht with a max speed of 60 knots (69mph), and the AM37 is what the company describes as "a gran turismo leisure boat with an even higher degree of luxury". But 50 knots (57mph) is still nothing to be sniffed at.

Drawing from Aston Martin's Vulcan both the AM37 and AM37S use carbon fibre and other high strength, low weight composite materials, teamed with Quintessences vacuum fusion tech to give the hull the strength it needs without creating rigidity, whilst still offering a sharp, knife edge shape.

The model will officially debut at the Monaco Yacht Show this September, where we're sure it will impress, hopefully leading Aston Martin to put this into production sooner rather than later.
