Aston Martin Hits The Water

Friday, 17 February 2017 16:48

Daniel Craig as James Bond has often been seen on luxurious yachts but that may be about to change as sports car specialist Aston Martin enters the powerboat market.

After making its world premiere in Monaco last September, the Aston Martin AM37 powerboat will be shown for the first time in the U.S. at an exhibition in Miami Beach where the first Aston Martin powerboat is set to be one of the highlights of the show.

The AM37 – which can carry up to eight people – is the ultimate day cruiser, designed and crafted with meticulous attention to detail, superior levels of workmanship and an incredible degree of sophistication. The boats are built at the U.K. premises of «Quintessence Yachts» to an extremely high standard.

More Sedate Luxury

At the helm, the AM37's carbon fibre dashboard echoes styling elements from Aston Martin's most advanced sports cars. It includes the finest leather with functional features, such as the steering wheel, throttle handles and joystick in polished metal.

finews.asia recently featured the sailing yacht known from the James Bond film «Skyfall» which is up for sale – a jewel of the seas which has much more to offer than just film star allure. Regina, a luxurious two-master sailing boat, is the No. 1 object of desire at Engel & Voelkers, a Hamburg-based yachting broker.
