APRIL 17 2017 / SIMON DE BURTON

Aston Martin unveiled the prototype of the 11.3m AM37 powerboat at the Monaco Yacht Show late last year. Designed in collaboration with naval architect Mulder Design and built by Quintessence Yachts, the £1m-plus vessel will be offered in two versions – the AM37 and the sportier AM37S – featuring carbon-fibre dashboards, car-type steering wheels and an innovative “sliding deck” that enables the cockpit to be completely covered by an electrically operated three-part panel that folds beneath the aft deck when the boat is in use.
